Alex Antonaras: The Ultimate Ram or Diva?

By Chameleón
Lil' Learners

QUEST senior Alex Antonaras was crowned the 2012 Mr. Ram winner on Thurs., March 15.

While Antonaras will be most remembered to the audience for dancing to the Christmas routine from the movie, Mean Girls, the backstage crew will never forget his outrageous backstage demands.

"My dressing room better be ready when I get there," Antonaras reminded his backup dancers over the phone the night before.

If the stage crew thought running the Homecoming Queen Pageant was madness, they could never imagine the ridiculous demands that Mr. Ram contestants would make, especially from Antonaras.

"I need a double-double PRONTO! Where's Glen Coco?!" cried out Antonaras while Adam Rhodes shaved his chest hair.

He insisted on specific preparations for his dressing room including, but not limited to, three hair and make up staff, a masseuse, and an esthetician.

"At first I thought being included in the performance would be fun. After working with Alex, it seemed to be just the opposite," says senior Robert Cass, one of the four dancers.

"Does my butt look big in this dress?" Antonaras asked Rhodes before pre-show.

The stage crew did their best to meet his requests during the Mr. Ram pageant.

"He was always yelling at us if we didn't do something the second he said so," adds Cass. "If it wasn't done perfectly, there was chaos."

They were given specific instructions to leave big boxes of chocolates everywhere in his sight to "make him feel like a king."

While some students think that this kind of treatment is a bit much, others support it completely.

"I think the boys have to go through many hoops to run for Mr. Ram and any little thing that can help keep them stress-free is worth doing so they don't have a breakout last minute," says Annie Leowitz, junior. "In the end, Alex was awesome."

To the excitement of the Antonaras' groupies in the audience, Antonaras threw his fabulous Santa Claus dress to the crowd after winning the title of Mr. Ram. The dress got torn to shreds, and pieces have been sold off to Mr. Ram fans.

For the talent portion of Mr. Ram, on Thurs. March 15th, Alex Antonaras and his friends performed the Jingle Bell Rock dance from the movie Mean Girls with much fervor.

Annual Charles' Jr. Day, A Dream Come

By Rosie Cheeks
Important Stuff

Ladies and gentlemen, the day has finally come. It is what many of us have been waiting for: the National Charles' Jr. (for all you fatties in the United States).

A majority of Americans have experienced the pure joy of biting into a nice, juicy, delicious burger from Charles' Jr.

In response from consumers requests, it is finally official that all Charles' Jr. restaurants will be giving out free burgers and french fries all day on March 4.

"When I heard about what Charles' Jr. is doing, I was so stoked!" said Jerome Fatigue.

"I couldn't believe it. It is a dream come true. I admit I am quite addicted to Charles' Jr. and this is just perfect that I get to eat as many burgers as I want, for free!"

Supplies are limited, so hurry in and get your free burger and fries. The first 100 guests will receive their own original Charles' Jr. shirts.

"On March 4 you will definitely see me waiting in line for a nice juicy five by five Charles' Jr. burger, with an order of animal style fries, and oh don't forget a large Coke," states ten year old Raymond Diamond.

Charles' Jr. advises consumers they are not responsible for any obesity caused in the United States.

"I admit I am quite addicted to Charles' Jr. and this is just perfect that I get to eat as many burgers as I want, for free!"
- Jerome Fatigue

Also, they refuse to comment on whether or not the meat is injected with hormonal growth liquid (for the cows to digest) because they want people to continue eating their burgers.

If you "Like" Charles' Jr. on Facebook and you will get a free drink with your meal.

"I cannot wait for the Annual I Charles' Jr. day to happen," said the sales marketer for Kingdom of Burgers and Fries. "When they announced in the news, I made sure that I had nothing planned for that whole day."

President Obama recently officially announced on his Tumblr page that Annual Charles' Jr. will soon be a national holiday.

Obama canceled President's Day, saying "We all know who the president is so why do we need to celebrate that day all for him?"

Obama is thrilled to have this day as a National Holiday, granting a bill stating that all U.S. citizens (including those with green cards) in the labor force will have a minimum of five hours off of work, to be able to go to the nearest Charles' Jr. and enjoy a lovely heart attack on a plate, with a side of fries, and a free t-shirt (if you are lucky).

Millikan's Jail House Blues

By Doctor Professor
Lil' Learners

With recent economic setbacks hindering Millikan, Dr. Jeffrey Cornejo proposed a new plan to merge with Los Angeles County Jail to conserve funds, provisions, and transportation costs.

"This deal will be mutually beneficial for both Millikan and the [Los Angeles County] penitentiary," said Cornejo.

Cornejo added, "It will take some time to adjust, but I trust the student body to make all new inmates feel welcome to the Millikan community."

You can expect school-wide changes in preparation for the merge. The 900, 700, and 600 buildings will be renovated to accommodate cell blocks.

Additionally, the campus will divide with the cafeteria, field, gym and quad to be a communal place for both inmates and students.

Sophomore Benito Mussolini said they were "pumped".

"I bet prisoners are really good at crafting. I've watched Oz. They can make a shank out of a toothbrush," said Mussolini.

A mentor program similar to Shadow Day will be instituted to better familiarize prisoners with the grounds next month. Each student will be paired with an inmate to escort them around Millikan. It will be called "friendly bonds".

"I am really good with kids," says inmate Bruce "The Punisher" Goldberg.

"They used to call me Bruce 'The Babysitter' Goldberg, but after I was convicted, 'The Punisher' seemed more suiting."

Millikan will also be adopting the Los Angeles County Jail's uniform policy. The coordinating, orange jumpsuit attire of Millikan students and inmates will look "sleek" and "professional" notes Cornejo.

Prison studies teacher Joseph Stalin receives the new arrivals with open arms.

"This will be a real life application of prison studies class. A hands-on opportunity is just what my students need," said Stalin enthusiastically.

2012 Brings the End of the World... for Millikan

By Mighty Mouse
For the Rejects

The end is near and it is closer than previously assumed. Cultural zeitgeist (spirit of time) informs us that the ancient Mayans, while they were flipping through their calendars, jotted "doomsday" down on December 21, 2012 and circled it in red. Turns out, however, that doomsday was actually yesterday. The Mayan prediction does not foresee the planet blowing up. Instead it foresees widespread disasters that will probably cause an ice age that changes life, civilization, and society. That said, yesterday certainly held disaster after disaster on the

Join Millikan’s Rap Crew

By :)
Dial-Up

We have all experienced Millikan’s many musical talents through band, orchestra, and chorus. But what about forming a rap group? For the past year students have been asking to rap and add a little remix to the many classical songs played in our musical productions. Millikan music directors finally cracked, and said yes! Juniors Jeff Cotledge, Sierra Scott, Alex O’Lawrence, and Corrina LeBlanc formed the group and fought to get it approved. Scott is very proud to have created what she says is like the YMCMB (Young Money Cash Money Business) of Millikan, and also adds she is proud to be the Nicki Minaj of the group. The new addition to chorus has yet to come up with a name, but they are way ahead in creating beats, songs, and rhymes to make their group a hit at Millikan’s musical performances. They have released mix-tapes and previously handed them out to Millikan students. They seem to be Millikan campus.

The Big Break-Up

Monica and Jake broke up! After a year of serious dating, they finally called it quits. The news spread like lightning through Facebook yesterday afternoon at around 3:56 p.m. To inform the jaw-dropping news to the rest of the world, a YouTube video was created entitled “Jakica 2012,” which reached over 4 million viewers overnight. “I didn’t know the couple personally, but after watching the video, I realized what a tragedy it truly is,” posted YouTube user moodytalker546.

Lunchtime Milk Fiasco

Sometime during yesterday’s

lunch, the cafeteria ran out of chocolate milk. Soon thereafter, fights broke out for the last carton. Immediately, the Millikan air force was sent out to drop missiles from above to break up the scene. When asked about the spectacle, Dr. Jeffrey Cornejo responded, “The entire thing was completely unnecessary. What students should really be concerned with is their uniforms. They need to realize that collars are the law!” Little developed after the catastrophe, but a moral was certainly learned: chocolate milk is a precious gift from above. Always keep extra.

Attack of the S.S.

Hours after yesterday’s lunchtime milk war, flocks of seagulls traveled to Millikan with a plan to take over the school. Leader of the Seagull Squad (S.S.), Bernard M. Flight, commanded his army to attack everyone in sight, including students and staff. Fortunately, Millikan’s airforce was able to defeat Colonel Flight before he became truly dangerous. What were his reasons for harassing Millikan you may ask? Reporter L.L. Kool-Aid traveled to the bird cage where he was being kept for interrogation. His response was, “Those Rams are to blame for everything, for global warming, for poverty, for the Kardarshians lasting this long. Extermination was needed.”

MISSING PERSON

A campus game of hide and seek on March 8 turned dire when Millikan student Miley Carlton was never located by fellow players. Her whereabouts are still in question and administration has various rescue efforts under way. Above, she is shown in her last known hiding location. If you have any information concerning Miley Carlton, please contact Millikan High School faculty at 1-800-howdidthis-dumbkidgetlost.

The Super Life of Monica Daley

By Bye
Editor-in-Grief

Students, coaches and teachers are beginning to wonder how co-principal Monica Daley has been able to memorize everyone’s name. More importantly, how has she appeared at every event Millikan holds? What many are not aware of is that Daley was actually born with super memorization and self-duplication powers. She refers to herself as the Double Daley. When Daley first came to Millikan in 2010, she told students to test her, to see if she remembered their names. Of course, she never failed. “I’ve been given this gift where my mind takes a picture of the individual that I’m speaking to and I store it in my brain along with their name, birthday, favorite food, and pet peeve,” says Daley. She has also gone to every game and event Millikan has ever been a part of since she became principal. She actually clones herself so she can go to different games that are held within the same hour. Her clones, however, have purple pupils. To do so, she must swallow a spoonful of lemon and sugar, clap her hands, and jump up and down in any opened doorway until a clone begins to form. These clones are equipped with her knowledge, memories, and personality. They also gain each other’s information, in case Daley meets someone new or records the win of a game. Now that you know the super life of Daley, look deep into her eyes and see if you are talking to the original Daley, or a just a replica.

Psst... Look Here! (Ha! Made You Look)

By Sound of Silence
Lil’ Learners

There once was a little news piece,
Who lived in a certain school,
It used to love to play pranks and tease,
And turn everyone into a fool.
One day it whipped up a tale,
That everyone thought was true,
And so the jokes did sail,
And the pranks were played on you.
We hope you are not irate,
And will recognize that this is fake,
But not quite all lies.
Some of it may be true,
Some not quite so,
It all depends on you,
And how you analyze the truth from head to toe.
So take a look on this topsy turvey day,
When up is down and down is nowhere.
Please don’t be angry.
Don’t gnash your teeth.
Don’t pull out your hair.
We can see you are in distress
And about to burn this page.
Don’t blame the paper for this mess.
Just take a deep breath and let out the rage.
Let all jokes waver,
And smile and wave,
You’re waving at a paper,
That’s a little deranged.
So live and laugh at these pleasant jokes.
You know you were fooled, you gullible folks.

School Prank Gone Wrong

By A Meer Cat
Big Mouths

Last February, Millikan kindergarten Hairy Poxter thought it would be funny to hide a pile of 450 student-written essays, which had already been graded by English teacher Professor Sloghurn. The student hid the graded essays underneath the teacher’s desk. Sloghurn searched frantically for them, even looking in trees for them. All he found were a handful of apples. Anyway, back to the point. The students watched Sloghurn breathing heavily. Eventually, he had a heart attack while looking for them. “I was just trying to be funny. I didn’t think he’d drop to the floor, panting, gripping his heart!” says Poxter, “Who would know that the way he was acting was a sure sign of a coming heart attack?” And indeed, no one knew what was to become of the English teacher. “We were caught in the moment,” explained senior citizen LOLing, “It was really gnarly to watch.” Even the coroner rubbed his jelly donut-filled stomach in bafflement when he saw the professor and couldn’t name the cause of death until Poxter confessed. No charges were pressed against the kindergartener. Instead, the young man was assigned to three hours of underneath-the-desk gum scraping. While he scraped those sticky, saliva draped colors of teenage rebellion, he looked at Sloghurn’s unmoved essays and sobbed silently in remorse.

The Food Fight Games Arrive

By Sound Of Silence
Lil’ Learner

Millikan Co. and Panem will present the arrival of the 74th annual Food Fight Games On Mar. 23. Therefore, it is now time to fetch out your best protective gear, moldiest food --which you have been hiding in the pantry from your angry mother for five decades-- and enlist at the closest “reaping” center immediately. The world will be watching the televised Food Fight Games, fought in different lunch room areas around the 12 school districts. Each participant will battle to the death in the grimmest spoiled gourmet battle ever encountered in this generation, fueled by adrenaline-rushed thrills and pure grit. Once you enlist, you will be trained in the finest lunch room simulation center where you will demonstrate your skills by throwing slosh-covered lunch trays, shooting moldy brussel sprouts from a sling shot, combating in a hand duel with nothing but a six foot long stale cinnamon twist, and last but not least, learning how to create food bombs from last year’s tuna casserole. During your training, you will have access to endless supplies of sugar that you can eat until your teeth rot. You can have the finest luxuries like limited edition cookbooks. Most importantly, you can feast your nostrils on the delicate aroma of spoiled meals. Finalists will then duel at the mega dining arena to determine the champion of the Food Fight Games. The winner receives an endless supply of sugar for his or her district and a Pizza Tray Pin that bestows the honorary title of Victor of the 74th Food Fight Games. “I left the Food Fight Games toothless and a disgrace to my district,” says contestant Rad-ish Root who recently fell in the crossfire of battle. Root adds, “I shall never forget the blood shed at the final encounter.” Pasta Meallark says, “Don’t sign up! Save yourself while you can! Join the rebellion! Run away! Run away!” If you wish to find out more information about the Food Fight Games, please visit the nearest reaping station near you, and “May the foods be ever in your flavor.”

Boys Swim Team: How to Grow a Mustache

By Chameleón
Lil’ Learner

As spring gets closer, the ultimate trend around campus is mustaches. Boys and girls alike are growing out their upper lip facial hair in curvaceous forms and with intricate detail. For others interested in following the trend, here are tips from the boys swim team on growing a mustache to perfection.

Step 1 – Exfoliate the Upper Lip Area

“I usually use a small toothbrush, put some facial scrub on it, and brush my upper lip in small circles. This creates a smooth base for the mustache and also stimulates the follicles making it grow faster,” says Jake Nieto, senior. Step 2 – Do Not Touch Upper Lip for 10 Days “This gives a good time frame for the mustache to grow out to its full potential,” says Kyle Nottage.

He also mentioned that it is best not to brush your teeth during this time period because the chemicals from the toothpaste can slow the growth process.

Step 3 – Trim and Curl

Once the hair has grown out into a full-blown, Texas style mustache you must trim it regularly to keep up appearances. Curling the ends is also suggested for maximum coolness. “And don’t forget to condition it in the shower so it stays soft,” adds Yassine Bouzarif.

However, this isn’t just a fashion trend. The facial hair has been scientifically proven to increase boyancy in the water. Shave a few seconds off your race time, without shaving your stash.

Planking: Plank You Very Much

By Doctor Professor
Lil’ Learner

After intense deliberation, Millikan has embraced the new ‘Planking’ craze and is permitting its addition to next year’s sport options. Planking, for those poor, culturally deprived hermits who don’t own a computer or literally live under a rock, is a national epidemic in which someone lies rigid and face-down with their arms at their side in a bizarre location. The resulting impression is a plank of wood, hence the name ‘Planking.’ “Some people think planking is easy, but you have no idea the kind of training I do,” said junior Vladimir Lenin. “Sometimes, I lie there for hours on end. I work up such a sweat. It is crazy.” Tryouts for varsity and JV planking squad begin next month. Prospective recruits must submit a resume of their planking experience. The trial process will be ‘grueling’ said coach Leon Trotsky. “I expect a lot out of these kids. This is my-- I mean their-- chance to really succeed at something when they failed at everything else and still live with their parents. I mean-- wait do not put that in,” said Trotsky. Millikan has high hopes to snatch up the CIF planking title next year.

ONE, TWO, THREE, FOUR, I DECLARE A THUMB WAR

That’s right, thumb wrestling will be a sport at Millikan next year. “It has been my dream to compete in thumb wrestling tournaments, said wrestler, Thomas Luka. “Now my dream can become a reality.” Thumb wrestling will replace of regular wrestling because it prevents serious injuries for the wrestlers (although getting a sprained thumb is a very grave situation.) Thumb wrestling requires much skill and training and a very strict rule book that. If you are interested in joining next year, talk to the wrestling coach, Rocky Rhoades, (find him under the bleachers) as soon as possible.

Girls Softball Loses Arms

By Cheerios
Lil’ Learner

Despite the successful start of a new season, it seems the girls’ softball team is experiencing some...minor difficulties. It seems that over half the team has lost their arms. These past couple of weeks have been filled with trips to the emergency room and complaints to Dr. Cornejo from frantic parents.

“I really don’t know what happened,” says one of the girls on the team who was not affected by this strange occurrence...yet. “One day we were practicing our usual pitching drills. Some girls were complaining about their arms being sore, but there was nothing unusual about that. The next minute, I see Kaylie Vestnick’s arm halfway across the field!”

According to the softball coaches, these turn of events are nothing out of the ordinary. “It’s called armasitosis,” explained Don Harper. “The girls have been working very hard during practices, going through drills that require a lot of upper body strength, targeting the arms especially. The stress on the arms has caused them to, well, fall off. No biggie. They’ll grow back eventually.” Despite this unfortunate circumstance, the girls decided that the show must go on. Budget cuts have put a huge damper on the athletics department, leaving athletes with a lack of supplies.

To remain resourceful, the girls have decided to use their arms for bats. It’s been a struggle for them to use one arm to hold the bat in their hand, especially since most of the girls are right handed, but its proven to get the job done.

According to the coaches, the girls are now hitting the balls to astronomical distances. Beating past hitting records from the last few decades. More hits always equal more runs. “I hit my first home run EVER during practice. It’s slightly uncomfortable to have this big gaping hole where my arms used to be, but hey, my new bat is working to my advantage,” says PEACE sophomore Dolly Emette.

ENTER FOR YOUR CHANCE TO WIN COURTSIDE
